Declarative and Interrogative Sentences

Declarative sentences make statements. They end with periods. For example: I like to go to the library.

Interrogative sentences ask questions. They end with question marks. For example: What time does the library open?

Activity

Miscommunication Play a game in which two people have a conversation with each other. One player can only use declarative sentences and the other player can only use interrogative sentences. The conversation should be fast-paced: players are not allowed to stop and think before speaking.
